Background: There are two recurring themes in discussions of access to higher education in Washington State: (1) enrollment limits; and (2) the declining proportion of the state budget dedicated to higher education.

During the past 10 years, the state's participation rate in higher education programs has declined. In 1981, the state was seventh in the nation in higher education participation; by 1990, this ranking had fallen to 29th, below the national average.

The Higher Education Coordinating Board (HECB) has adopted the goal of reaching the 90th percentile in national participation rates by the year 2010.

Summary of Bill: It is the policy of the state of Washington that the essential requirements level budget for higher education include enrollment levels necessary to maintain the participation rate funded in the 1993 fiscal year.

It is the policy of the state of Washington that each biennial higher education essential requirements level (ERL) budget calculation, for each FTE student, at a minimum equal the rate assumed in the Omnibus Appropriations Act for the last fiscal year of the previous biennium plus an inflation factor.

It is the policy of the state of Washington that budget documents display the number of students necessary and the amount of money needed to incrementally increase enrollments and reach by the year 2010 the goals adopted by the Higher Education Coordinating Board in its enrollment plan.

The participation rate used to calculate enrollment levels will be based on: (1) fall enrollment as reported in the higher education enrollment report of the Office of Financial Management (OFM); (2) the fall enrollment as reported in the management information system of the State Board for Community and Technical Colleges; and (3) the fall population forecast of OFM.

Estimates of future participation rates and enrollment levels shall be based on procedures and standards established by a technical working group. Members of the group shall represent: the Higher Education Coordination Board; the State Board for Community and Technical Colleges; fiscal and higher education committees of the House of Representatives and the Senate; and the Office of Financial Management. Formal estimates of future participation rates and enrollment levels will be determined by OFM. OFM will submit the formal estimates to the fiscal committees of the House of Representatives and the Senate. The Higher Education Coordinating Board will periodically review enrollment goals and report to the governor and higher education committees.

It is the policy of the state that financial need not be a barrier to participation in higher education; therefore, it is the policy of the state that the essential requirements level budget calculation include funding for state student financial aid. The calculation should include a funding level equal to the amount provided in the second year of the previous biennium in the Omnibus Appropriations Act, adjusted for enrollment increases. The cost of attendance should be calculated by the Higher Education Coordinating Board and provided to OFM and the appropriate legislative committees.

The provisions in current law that limit community college district enrollment to plus or minus 2 percent of the amount authorized in the operating budget appropriations act are repealed.

Fiscal Note: Requested April 1, 1993.

Effective Date: The bill contains an emergency clause and takes effect July 1, 1993.

Testimony For: (Higher Education) Access to higher education is the only method to increase real wages. Until higher education is fully funded we will continue to increase taxes. Essential Requirements Levels are not calculated the same for all agencies. K-12, social services, and corrections actually have growth in the current budget. An investment must be made in higher education to maintain current levels of service. This bill establishes good policy. In order to maintain access, enrollment levels must be increased. The bill reflects the recommendations in the Higher Education Coordinating Board master plan.
