Brief Summary of Bill

- Makes the public employees' collective bargaining law applicable to teaching assistants and research assistants at Washington State University.

Hearing Date: 1/25/08

Staff: Jill Reinmuth (786-7134).

Background:

Employees enrolled in academic programs at Washington State University, like other students, are exempt from the state civil service law. As a result, they do not have a right to engage in collective bargaining under the state civil service collective bargaining law. They also are not granted a right to engage in collective bargaining under the public employees' collective bargaining law. Legislation enacted in 2002 granted that right to teaching assistants and research assistants at the University of Washington.

Summary of Bill:

The public employees' collective bargaining law applies to Washington State University (University) with respect to certain employees enrolled in academic programs.

students. The Legislature does not intend to restrict or prohibit, with respect to matters outside the scope of bargaining:

- the exercise of shared governance functions of the faculty; and
- the exercise of the functions of the graduate and professional student association, the associated students organization, or other similar organizations.

The University is not restricted from:

- considering the merits, necessity, or organization of any program or activity, including whether to establish, modify, or discontinue a program or activity; and
- having sole discretion over student admission requirements, criteria for awarding degrees, academic requirements for selection of student employees, initial appointment, and the content and supervision of courses, curricula, grading requirements, and research programs.

Bargaining Unit

For covered student employees, the members of an appropriate bargaining unit are:

- teaching assistants and research assistants;
- staff assistants, project assistants, and veterinary assistants;
- tutors, readers, and graders; and
- employees with substantially equivalent duties enrolled in an academic program.

Students who are research assistants are excluded if they perform research primarily related to their dissertation and have incidental or no service expectations placed on them by the University.

Scope of Bargaining

The scope of bargaining excludes the following subjects:

- the ability to terminate an employee who is not meeting the University's academic requirements;
- the amount of tuition or fees, except that tuition/fee remission or waiver is within the scope of bargaining;
- the University's academic calendar; and
- the number of students to be admitted to a class or section.

Compensation

The compensation provisions in a collective bargaining agreement may not exceed the amount or percentage established by the Legislature. However, the employer may provide additional compensation that exceeds that provided by the Legislature. If a compensation provision is affected by subsequent modification of an appropriations act, the parties must bargain for a replacement provision.
