Hearing Date: 1/31/14

Staff: Madeleine Thompson (786-7304).

Background:

Some research has indicated that people with developmental disabilities have greater difficulty accessing health care that meets their unique needs. A report of the National Council on Disability finds that the absence of professional training on disability competency issues for health care practitioners is one of the most significant barriers that prevent people with disabilities from receiving appropriate and effective health care and disability competency is not a core curriculum requirement for professional health care training programs.

This analysis was prepared by non-partisan legislative staff for the use of legislative members in their deliberations. This analysis is not a part of the legislation nor does it constitute a statement of legislative intent.

The Washington Student Achievement Council (WSAC) administers the state's student financial aid programs and provides strategic planning, conducts research, and policy analysis for higher education in Washington.

Summary of Bill:

It is recognized that students in various health care fields at public and private institutions of higher education and technical schools throughout the state would benefit from specialized training and exposure to the unique care needs of adults with developmental disabilities.

Subject to the appropriation of funds for the purpose, the WSAC shall develop a centralized grant program for institutions to develop training projects aimed at improving the provision of medical services to adult individuals with developmental disabilities. The WSAC may administer the grant program in consultation with the Department of Health. By December 1, 2015, the WSAC must report to the appropriate committees of the Legislature regarding grants awarded. The WSAC must also report on any other efforts or progress in expanding or improving training with respect to the provision of medical services to adult individuals with developmental disabilities.

Appropriation: None.

Fiscal Note: Requested on January 24, 2014.

Effective Date: The bill takes effect 90 days after adjournment of the session in which the bill is passed.
