Staff Summary of Public Testimony: PRO: It is an oversight in the law that victims and survivors of victims of felonies are afforded statutory rights to speak at a sentencing hearing for felony convictions, while victims and survivors of victims of non-felony domestic violence offenses are not afforded the same statutory rights. This oversight should be corrected because domestic violence victims and survivors of victims do not experience any less level of abuse than victims or survivor of victims of felonies. While courts are often good at affording domestic violence victims and survivors of victims the right to speak at sentencing hearings for domestic violence convictions, the opportunity for victims or survivors of victims to speak is not always given. It is important for domestic violence victims and survivors of victims to speak at sentencing hearings for domestic violence convictions because their testimonies educate everyone and allows our society to address the issue of domestic violence. Having the ability to speak at sentencing hearings is also a key part in allowing domestic violence victims and survivors of victims to recover and would allow them to participate in the criminal justice system.
