Background: School districts are required to provide instructional programs to a wide variety of children with very different learning needs. Providing instruction to this wide range of students can be very difficult for school districts. This is recognized in special education statutes, which clearly allow school districts to contract with other organizations to provide instructional services for special education students.

Summary of Bill: A school board may contract with nonsectarian schools and organizations to provide educational services for district students, including, but not limited to, students who have been suspended or expelled, who are academically at risk, or who have been subject to disciplinary actions due to behavioral problems.

The contract must specify the specific learning standards that students are expected to achieve.

The school district is to receive the same level of funding from the state as if the student were participating in the school district's educational program. The Superintendent of Public Instruction (SPI) is directed to provide school districts maximum flexibility when establishing funding criteria for students enrolled in these programs.
