Background: Superior court clerks may contract with collection agencies to collect unpaid court obligations. The term "court obligations" is not defined in statute. The debtor must pay the collection costs. If the debtor is a criminal defendant under the Department of Correction's jurisdiction, counties may only use a collection agency if the department agrees.

Summary of Bill: The term "court obligations" is defined to mean legal financial obligations that may be imposed under the felony or misdemeanor conviction. Those obligations include restitution, victims' compensation fees, court costs, county or interlocal drug fund fines, court-appointed attorneys' fees, costs of defense, fines, and any other financial obligation that is assessed to the offender.

The superior court may assess the costs of collection as court costs at sentencing or at any time within 10 years.

Superior court clerks are encouraged to use collection agencies for defendants under the department's supervision with the department's approval.

Contracts with collection agencies may specify the scope of work, remuneration, and other appropriate charges.

Fiscal Note: Not requested.

Effective Date of Bill: Ninety days after adjournment of session in which bill is passed.
