SENATE COMMITTEE ON EDUCATION

Staff: Susan Mielke (786-7422)

Background: The Washington State Constitution gives school districts the authority to levy local property taxes, if the voters of the district approve the levy. Such approval requires at least 60 percent of those voting to vote "yes," and the voter turnout must be at least equal to 40 percent of the voter turnout at the previous general election. If the voter turnout is less than 40 percent of the previous general election turnout, the measure can still be approved if the number of those voting "yes" equals at least 60 percent of the number that represents 40 percent of the previous general election turnout.

Approval for a school district to issue bonds for capital purposes requires at least 60 percent of those voting to vote "yes," and the voter turnout must be at least equal to 40 percent of the voter turnout at the previous general election.

To amend the Constitution, an amendment must be passed by two-thirds majority of both houses and approved by a majority vote of the people.

Summary of Bill: School district levy and bond issues are approved by a simple majority of those voting. The 60 percent super-majority and the 40 percent voter turnout requirements are eliminated.

This act takes effect only if a constitutional amendment is approved by a majority vote of the people at the general election in November.

Appropriation: None.

Fiscal Note: Available.

Effective Date: Upon approval of SJR 8215 by a majority vote of the people at the general election in November.
