Staff: Deborah Frazier (786-7152).

Background: Under Title 71A RCW, the Department of Social and Health Services (DSHS) contracts for community residential programs for persons with developmental disabilities, as well as Medicaid personal care, family support or respite care, employment and day programs, and other services.

Five residential habilitation centers (RHC) provide services to persons with developmental disabilities according to RCW 71A.20.020. Currently, there are approximately 1,230 residents in RHCs.

In 1997, representatives from DSHS and a group of 19 stakeholders met throughout the year to determine the direction the department should take in providing services to people with developmental disabilities. An agreement in principle was reached at the end of the year, which stated that people with developmental disabilities and their families should have a full spectrum of choices in deciding what services they should receive.

Summary of Amended Bill: The Legislature affirms the commitment to secure for all persons with developmental disabilities the opportunity to choose where they live. This choice should include both community services and residential habilitation centers (RHC). The choice must be supported by state policy and allow, as much as possible, for people to stay in their own homes or communities.

Community support services are defined as one or more of the services listed in RCW 71A.12.040.

Until 2003, persons assessed by the department to have needs which require the resources provided by a residential habilitation center must be offered admittance to an RHC. This includes adolescents only under exceptional circumstances. The offer of admission to an RHC must be accompanied by an offer of community support services. However, once budgeted funds specifically designated for community support services are exhausted, the department may neither offer community support services nor RHC admission.

Until 2003, all eligible applicants for developmental disabilities services and those already receiving services must be given notice of the existence and availability of residential habilitation centers and community residential support services. Available options must be clearly explained, with services customized to fit the unique needs and circumstances of the developmentally disabled clients and their families.

Until, 2003, the capacity of community residential support services and residential habilitation center services must not be reduced below the budgeted capacity in each of these services in the 1997-99 Appropriations Act, except as reductions are necessary to adhere to an agreement with the federal Department of Justice regarding Fircrest School, and subject to budget direction from the Governor.

If this capacity is not needed for current clients of the department, any vacancies that may occur in community support services or residential habilitation center services will be used to expand services to eligible developmentally disabled persons not now receiving services. If there is a vacancy in a residential habilitation center, it must be made available to any eligible person who is seeking and desiring the services of an RHC. That applicant must also be offered community service. If RHC capacity is not needed for permanent residents, vacancies will be used for respite care or other services for eligible clients. The unused capacity may only be used if community support service funds are available.

The department will increase vocational and community service access to residents of residential habilitation centers.

The department, with the participation of the developmental disabilities stakeholders work group, will conduct an assessment of all persons with developmental disabilities who are eligible for services. The analysis will include a broad look at all services and will result in a long-term strategic plan for the department. The plan will provide phased-in data collection, and analysis of programs, services, and funding for the developmentally disabled. The plan will also include budget and statutory recommendations intended to secure choice for all persons with developmental disabilities. The plan will not be used to determine allocation of services to individuals.

The provisions of the bill expressly do not create an entitlement to any services.

Appropriation: None.

Fiscal Note: Available.

Effective Date of Amended Bill: The bill contains an emergency clause and takes effect immediately.

Testimony For: (Children & Family Services) People with developmental disabilities should have a choice of where they live and this bill stresses choice. Pro-community and pro-RHC groups have been fighting for too long. This bill sets a direction for the department to take which will allow it to truly respond to the needs of the developmentally disabled people in the state.

(Appropriations) Through the work of the stakeholders' group that has been meeting for the last year, this bill represents the agreement that has been reached by advocates for the community and for RHCs after many years of disagreement. This bill sets a direction for the department to take which will allow it to be responsive to the needs of the developmentally disabled.

Testimony Against: (Children & Family Services) None.

(Appropriations) None.
