BACKGROUND:

The Legislative Ethics Board was created in 1994 and consists of five citizen members, two senators and two representatives. The board issues advisory opinion and hears complaints with respect to legislators and legislative employees and ethics in public service.

The citizen members of the Legislative Ethics Board are prohibited from holding or campaigning for partisan elective officer full-time partisan offices, serving as an officer of a political party or a political committee, allowing his or her name to be used, or making contributions in support of or in opposition to any state candidate or ballot measure; or lobbying the Legislature, except that a member may appear before a legislative committee on matters pertaining to the board. Citizen members of the board may serve as a precinct committee person.

There is no prohibition against a citizen member of the Legislative Ethics Board from making contributions or allowing his or her name to be used in connection with state legislative races. There is also no prohibition against a citizen member of the board from campaigning for a seat in the state Legislature, within two years of serving on the board, against an incumbent who was a respondent in a complain before the board.
