Background:

The Teachers' Retirement System (TRS) Plan I includes teachers and school administrators hired prior to October 1, 1977. A retiree under this system may work 525 hours, or about 75 days, each year with no reduction in retirement benefits.

In a school district that has passed a resolution declaring a shortage of substitute teachers, a TRS Plan I retiree can work an additional 105 hours, for a total of about 90 days, as a substitute teacher. In a school district that has passed a resolution declaring an inability to find a replacement administrator to fill a vacancy, a TRS I retiree may serve as a substitute administrator for an additional 105 hours. The additional 105 hours is available only to those TRS Plan I retirees working as substitute teachers or administrators.

A resolution is valid only for the school year in which it is adopted. A copy of the resolution, with a list of retirees who have been hired, must be provided to the Department of Retirement Systems.

Summary of Bill:

Retired teachers and administrators may work an expanded number of hours as substitutes before losing pension benefits in school districts that have declared a shortage of substitute teachers or principals. Retired teachers and administrators working for school districts that have declared a shortage of substitute teachers may work for an additional 315 hours as substitute teachers. Retired principals working for school districts that have declared a shortage of principals may work an additional 315 hours as substitute administrators.

Appropriation: None.

Fiscal Note: Not requested.

Effective Date: Ninety days after adjournment of session in which bill is passed.

Testimony For: (Education) The pool of available substitute teachers is shrinking precipitously. This legislation will expand the pool by allowing retired teachers to substitute for additional hours each year without losing pension benefits. These retired teachers bring a wealth of experience into state classrooms. They have vital classroom management techniques and are dependable, screened, experienced, and highly skilled. The legislation will not cost the state any additional money, but it will provide districts with additional options when they need either substitute teachers or a substitute administrator on a temporary basis.

(Appropriations) We are seeing a serious shortage of substitutes and administrators in certain areas of the state. By allowing retired teachers and administrators to work more hours with no reduction in pension benefits, this bill will help address that shortage.
