Background:

The Governor has the responsibility of appointing and commissioning railroad police officers. Once appointed and commissioned, regulations provide that the officers must either complete a course of training prescribed by the Criminal Justice Training Commission (CJTC) or complete an alternative training program. The railroad corporation is not required to pay for the cost of training the officers.

Railroad police officers are required to wear a metal shield in plain view while on duty.

Summary of Bill:

The responsibility of commissioning and training railroad police is transferred from the Governor to the CJTC.

A railroad police officer is required to complete a course of training prescribed or approved by the CJTC. The corporation requesting the appointment of a railroad police officer must pay for the full cost of training.

While on duty, a railroad police officer may either wear a badge in plain view or carry official credentials and present them when requested.

Appropriation: None.

Fiscal Note: Available.

Effective Date: Ninety days after adjournment of session in which bill is passed.

Testimony For: The railroad police officers have a variety of duties and it is important that they are well trained. This bill gives the CJTC some control of training the officers and also ensures that all of the officers are well trained. The CJTC's standards of training the officers will be higher than the current standards. Because the railroad corporations will pay for the training, the training results in no additional cost to taxpayers.

Testimony Against: None.

Testified: (In support) Michael Parsons and Sharon Tolton, Criminal Justice Training Commission; and Larry Erickson, Washington Association of Sheriffs and Police Chiefs.
