Staff: Bill Robinson (786-7140).

Background:

The State of Washington is on a biennial budget cycle, in which the Legislature authorizes appropriations covering two years of expenditures. Appropriations for the 2001-03 biennium include the time period from July 1, 2001 through June 30, 2003. The appropriations in the operating budget include the general day-to-day operational expenses of state agencies, colleges and universities, institutions, public schools, and other state services. Employee salaries, goods and services, and welfare payments are typical operating expenses.

During the biennial budget cycle, the Legislature often makes adjustments or corrections to the biennial budget in a supplemental budget. A supplemental budget can be adopted each time the Legislature is in session.

A biennial operating budget was enacted in the 2001 legislative session, appropriating $22.8 billion from the state general fund. During the six months follow the adoption of the biennial budget, the state's revenue projections have been significantly reduced and caseload levels for education and social service programs, primarily medical assistance, have increased.

Summary of Substitute Bill:

The 2002 Supplemental Operating budget reduces appropriations from the state general fund by $330 million. This reduction is a combination of $351 million of appropriation increases for additional caseload costs and $681 million reductions to other programs. Total appropriations are increased by $493 million, primarily due to increased federal payments for medical assistance programs.
