Staff Summary of Public Testimony: PRO: The Garry Oak has a historical range from southern British Columbia to southern California. The tree provides a valuable habitat for numerous species such as migratory birds, the gray squirrel, deer, and turkey. The Garry Oak habitat is declining and is being destroyed in some areas by development and invasive species. It is important to raise the public's awareness of this tree's value and importance so that as many as possible are kept as part of the landscape.

Persons Testifying: PRO: Rocky Beach, Washington Department of Fish and Wildlife; Steve Robinson, Northwest Indian Fisheries Commission; David Thysell, citizen.
