Background:

The State Parks system, the fourth oldest in the nation, includes 117 developed parks on over 100,000 total acres. Each year, the system sees well over 40 million visitors, with many using one of the over 2,000 modern camping sites or other overnight accommodation, holding events with use of group facilities, or simply for day-use recreating purposes.

The Washington Department of Fish and Wildlife (WDFW), Department of Natural Resources (DNR), and State Parks and Recreation Commission (State Parks) are charged with managing the public lands of the state. Until July 1, 2011, there was no charge to the public for access to both the DNR or State Parks land and recreation sites. The WDFW charged $10 for the annual fish and wildlife lands vehicle use permit, or the permit was provided free of charge with all hunting and fishing licenses.

This analysis was prepared by non-partisan legislative staff for the use of legislative members in their deliberations. This analysis is not a part of the legislation nor does it constitute a statement of legislative intent.

State Parks have historically been funded with varying levels of state general fund. In response to reductions in general fund support and in an effort to make the State Parks self-supporting, agency request and subsequently enacted legislation in 2011 created the Discover Pass permit as a way to increase contributions from users.

The Discover Pass allows for vehicle access in designated recreational areas located on state lands owned or managed by the DNR, the WDFW, and the State Parks. The Discover Pass is the only pass needed to access recreational sites such as trailheads, parking areas, winter recreation areas, boat launches, and water trails. Visitors wishing to park on state recreational lands must obtain an annual Discover Pass or a Day-use permit allowing vehicle access. Revenues from the Discover Pass are first deposited into the Recreation Access Pass Account prior to being distributed to the agencies.

A Discover Pass or Day-use permit must be visible in a vehicle. Failure to display the Discover Pass or the Day-use permit is a natural resource infraction with a penalty of $99. If an annual Discover Pass is purchased within 15 days after notice of an infraction, the penalty is reduced to $59. District Courts have jurisdiction over natural resource infractions, including Discover Pass violations. In most instances, 32 percent of the fines assessed or collected through a District Court are provided to the state for deposit in the state general fund, while the remaining is retained by the county. Fines assessed and collected for county parking infractions are retained by the county.
