EFFECT: Modifies the purpose of the task force by removing language that the task force is established to recommend strategies for incorporating environmental justice principles into how state agencies discharge their responsibilities, to instead state that the task force is established to study the societal impact of environmental hazards on urban and rural areas of the state and create an inventory of changes that state agencies have already made to mitigate such impact.

Removes as members on the task force three members from community-based organizations that are nominated based upon maintaining a balanced and diverse distribution of ethnic, geographic, gender, sexual orientation, age, socioeconomic, and occupational representation.

Adds thirteen new members to the task force, including two Senators appointed by the President of the Senate, and two members from the House of Representatives appointed by the Speaker of the House of Representatives; one member from the public who is a nonvoting member and responsible for reporting, among other information, task force activities to the entire Legislature; and one member from an association or organization representing each of the following: builders, contractors, retail businesses, real estate agents, the timber industry, the agricultural industry, cattle ranchers, and a free-market think tank engaged in public policy assessments in Washington.

Removes the representative of statewide environmental justice interests and the chair of the Governor's Interagency Council on Health Disparities as the co-chairs of the task force, and instead requires the members of the task force to select the co-chairs.

Removes the requirement that the final report of the task force include recommendations, therefore directing the task force to only report on its findings.

Requires that any findings included in the final report be adopted by the entirety of the task force.

Requires that the final report of the task force be submitted to the entire Legislature, rather than to only the appropriate committees of the Legislature.

Specifies that the legislative members of the task force may receive reimbursement in accordance with provisions under current law.
