Background:

High-Occupancy Vehicle Lanes.

The Washington State Department of Transportation (WSDOT) and local authorities are authorized to designate any portion of a highway under their respective jurisdictions for the exclusive or preferential use of: (1) public transportation vehicles; (2) motorcycles; (3) private motor vehicles carrying a specified minimum number of passengers; and (4) certain categories of private transportation provider vehicles if the vehicle has a carrying capacity of at least eight passengers. The portion of highways with these restricted usage rules are known as high-occupancy vehicle (HOV) lanes.

The WSDOT and local authorities have the ability to specify certain times of days or certain specified days during which the HOV restrictions are in effect. The WSDOT and local authorities are also authorized to prohibit the use of an HOV lane by private transportation provider vehicles when the average transit speed in the HOV lane fails to meet United States Department of Transportation standards (falling below 45 miles per hour at least 90 percent of the time during peak hours).

Under current state administrative rule, the following motor vehicles are authorized to use the HOV lanes on interstate highways, state highways, and ramps: (1) municipal transit vehicles; (2) buses with a carrying capacity of 16 or more people; (3) motorcycles; (4) all vehicles meeting specified HOV-lane occupancy requirements (except for trucks with more than a 10,000 pounds maximum operating weight rating); and (5) officially marked law enforcement and fire department vehicles equipped with emergency lights and sirens that are operated by on-duty state patrol or local law enforcement or local or special district fire department personnel.

High-Occupancy Toll Lanes.

High-occupancy toll (HOT) lanes and express toll lanes (ETLs) are types of HOV lanes. The Washington State Transportation Commission (Commission) sets toll rates, establishes exemptions from them, and makes adjustments as required by conditions. These exemptions can vary by tolled facility. With limited exceptions, exemptions that apply to HOT lanes and ETLs typically apply to vehicles permitted to use HOV lanes.

Unlawful Use of a Highway Lane.

Violation of a restriction on vehicle usage placed on an HOV lane, HOT lane, or ETL by a driver is a traffic infraction. The base penalty for this traffic infraction is $48, as set by the Washington State Supreme Court by rule. The total amount assessed for this infraction, including fees and assessments, is $136.

Summary of Amended Bill:

Congestion Relief and Traffic Safety Account.

The Congestion Relief and Traffic Safety Account is created in the State Treasury and is an appropriated account. Expenditures from the Congestion Relief and Traffic Safety Account may only be used for purposes related to congestion relief and traffic safety.

Unlawful Use of a Highway Lane.

The traffic infraction for the violation by a driver of a restriction on vehicle usage placed on an HOV lane, HOT lane, or ETL is subject to an additional monetary penalty of $50. The traffic violation is also subject to an additional penalty of $150 if it is the second such offense committed within a two-year period. The violation is also subject to an additional penalty of $500 if it is the third or subsequent such offense committed within a two-year period. One-quarter of the additional monetary penalty collected must be deposited in the Congestion Relief and Traffic Safety Account. Three-quarters of the additional monetary penalty collected must be deposited in the Motor Vehicle Fund.

The current fine of $136 for all unlawful use of a highway lane offenses committed remains in place, with the additional penalties above added to it. The additional monetary penalties for this traffic infraction are not subject to any other additional fees or assessments.

If a person commits the traffic infraction of unlawful use of a highway lane and is using a dummy, doll, or other human facsimile to do so, the person must be assessed an additional $200 penalty. The additional penalty collected must be deposited in the Congestion Relief and Traffic Safety Account.

Intent Section.

The Legislature finds that individuals who engage in violations of the state's HOV lane restrictions frustrate congestion management efforts and incite anger in other transportation system users. As a result, the Legislature intends the escalating penalties for this traffic infraction to serve as a rebuke and to discourage this conduct.

Amended Bill Compared to Substitute Bill:

The amended bill clarifies when increases in the HOV lane usage traffic infraction fines will apply.

Appropriation: None.

Fiscal Note: Available.

Effective Date of Amended Bill: The bill takes effect 90 days after adjournment of the session in which the bill is passed.

Staff Summary of Public Testimony:

(In support) The goal of the bill as the WSDOT agency-request legislation is to deter single-occupancy vehicles from entering the HOV lanes and to thereby improve travel times for vehicles that meet the occupancy requirements of the HOV lanes. This bill has some differences from the bill heard last month in the House Transportation Committee. The substitute Senate bill lowers the agency-proposed penalty amounts for each fined tier and establishes a two-year time limit on the fine escalation.

Washington State Patrol (WSP) troopers stop a lot of repeat offenders, and these stops are not easy to do during times of high traffic when troopers are busy. If a driver is getting pulled over multiple times, it probably means the driver is improperly using HOV lanes frequently. There have been complaints from people who follow the HOV laws and ask why the WSP is not doing anything about it. In King County, the WSP troopers have seen a lot of dummies, blow-up dolls, and sticks with hats. People may feel this is a steep penalty, but if they do not violate the law, they will not have to pay it.

(Opposed) None.
