Background: Sexual Health Education. Current law requires every public school choosing to offer sexual health education to assure the education is:

- medically and scientifically accurate;
- age-appropriate;
- appropriate for students regardless of gender, race, disability status, or sexual orientation; and
- includes information about abstinence and other methods of preventing unintended pregnancy and sexually transmitted diseases.

2005 Guidelines for Sexual Health Information and Disease Prevention. Sexual health education must be consistent with the 2005 guidelines developed by the Department of Health (DOH) and the Office of the Superintendent of Public Instruction (OSPI).

Health and Physical Education K-12 Learning Standards. In 2016, OSPI adopted revised health and physical education learning standards. The eight learning standards are the required elements of instruction and are worded broadly to allow for local decision-making.

Choosing Sexual Health Education Curricula. OSPI, in consultation with DOH, must develop a list of sexual health education curricula consistent with the 2005 guidelines. This list must serve as a resource, be updated at least annually, and be available online.

Public schools offering sexual health education are encouraged to review their curricula and choose a curriculum from the list. Any public school offering sexual health education may identify, choose, or develop any other curriculum, if the curriculum chosen or developed complies with other requirements.

Excusal from and Review of Sexual Health Education. Parents or legal guardians may excuse their children from any planned sexual health education instruction by filing a written request with the school district board of directors, school principal, or designees. In addition, parents or legal guardians may review the sexual health education curriculum offered in their child's school by filing a written request.

Summary of Engrossed First Substitute Bill: Comprehensive Sexual Health Education. By September 1, 2021, every public school must provide comprehensive sexual health education as an integral part of the curriculum that is evidence-informed, inclusive for all students regardless of their protected class status, skills-based, and meets other requirements including:

- encourages healthy relationships based on mutual respect and affection and are free from violence, coercion, and intimidation;
- teaches how to identify and respond to attitudes and behaviors contributing to sexual violence;
- emphasizes the importance of affirmative consent, meaning conscious and voluntary agreement to engage in sexual activity, as a requirement before sexual activity; and

- is consistent with the health and physical education learning standards, which must be available on OSPI's website.

Comprehensive sexual health education must be phased in beginning with students in grades six through twelve by September 1, 2020, and then for students in grades kindergarten through five by September 1, 2021.

Evidence-informed means a program informed by scientific research and effective practice and replicates evidence-based programs or substantially incorporates elements of effective programs. All references to sexual health education are changed to comprehensive sexual health education.

Choosing Sexual Health Education Curricula. The list of sexual health education curricula must also be consistent with the health and physical education learning standards. OSPI must update the list at least biannually instead of annually.

By September 1, 2019, OSPI must develop comprehensive sexual health education instructional materials review tools and make them available online. Public schools must use the review tools when choosing curricula other than those from the list developed by OSPI.

Report. OSPI must require public school districts to annually report curricula used to provide comprehensive sexual health education. OSPI must report the results to the education committees of the Legislature by November 1, 2021, and biennially thereafter.

Excusal from Sexual Health Education. School districts must grant a parent's or legal guardian's written request to have their child excused from instruction in comprehensive sexual health education.

Staff Summary of Public Testimony on Original Bill: The committee recommended a different version of the bill than what was heard. PRO: Many students have been sexually assaulted or coerced into sexual activity, which is linked to suicide. This is a public health crisis. Young people will pursue sexual experiences regardless of what anyone tells them. In order for young people to make good choices, they need help understanding the ramifications of their choices. Comprehensive sexual health education provides this information. It is essential to students' health, relationships, and meeting their life goals. This type of education is not just about sex, and it does not teach students how to have sex. It can reduce unintended pregnancy and STDs, teach students about affirmative consent, and can help students avoid abusive relationships. Students in all school districts deserve to have information and learn and practice the skills they need to protect their health. This education must be provided without shame and judgment and must be inclusive of all identities.

Students should be able to see themselves in the curriculum. A little more than half of school districts are already providing this type of education. Small groups of people who oppose this type of education may prevent a school board from adopting it even though the majority of people want it. Parents can still opt their children out of this type of education. This bill aligns with one of the recommendations of the Governor's Interagency Council on Health Disparities.

CON: The decision to offer this type of education should lie with school boards and ultimately parents. This bill mandates values and may lead to a number of students leaving public schools. Comprehensive sexual health education can include graphic material and can teach students how to have sex. The curriculum can contain transgender promotion and confusion for young children. Parents should educate their children on these types of topics at home. The number of pregnancies and abortions are down, so the status quo is working.

OTHER: These issues are necessary, complicated, and controversial. Local communities are going to need a strong support system to implement this requirement. This requirement should be phased-in. Additional resources and professional development are needed to adopt and implement this requirement.
