HOUSE COMMITTEE ON CRIMINAL JUSTICE AND CORRECTIONS

Staff: Yvonne Walker (786-7841).

Background:

Community Supervision. Community supervision– is a technical term in the Sentencing Reform Act and includes up to one year in the county jail and one year of supervision in the community. The court may often subject the offender to limited crime-related prohibitions. Violations of community supervision conditions may result in up to 60 days in jail. Courts usually do not impose affirmative conditions (such as drug treatment) on an offender sentenced to community supervision.

Affirmative Conditions. Sentencing conditions known as crime-related prohibitions are commonly imposed by courts on offenders who are placed on community supervision, community placement, partial confinement, or the sex offender sentencing alternative. These conditions prohibit conduct that directly relates to the circumstances of the crime for which the offender was convicted, such as requiring a drug offender to not unlawfully possess or use controlled substances.

Current law states that crime-related prohibitions cannot direct an offender affirmatively to participate in rehabilitative programs or to otherwise perform affirmative conduct.

Trial courts are currently authorized to impose affirmative acts as conditions in specified circumstances, such as for sex offenders, who can be ordered to participate in crime-related treatment or counseling.

Pre-sentence Reports. Before imposing a sentence upon an offender, the court usually conducts a pre-sentence hearing. At that time, the court may order the Department of Corrections (DOC) to complete a pre-sentence report to assist the trial court in sentencing an offender after he or she has been convicted. Pre-sentence reports usually include prior convictions, prior arrests, employment history, education history, and family and social background.

Drug Offender Sentencing Alternative. The Drug Offender Sentencing Alternative (DOSA) allows a judge to waive imposition of an offender's sentence within the standard range. The judge may impose a sentence that must include confinement in a state facility for one-half of the midpoint of the standard range. While in confinement, the offender must complete a substance abuse assessment and receive substance abuse treatment and counseling.

The court must also impose one year of concurrent community custody and community supervision, which must include outpatient substance treatment and crime-related prohibitions. Courts usually do not impose other conditions such as affirmative conditions as part of the offender's sentence.

A first-time offender convicted of a drug offense may be eligible for the DOSA if the current offense only involved a small quantity of drugs as determined by the court. An offender is prohibited to participate in this program if the offender has any prior convictions for a sex or violent felony offense.

If an offender violates any of the DOSA sentencing conditions, the DOC may impose sanctions administratively and any violation hearings and subsequent sanctions must be held by the court.

An offender with a deportation order or detainer is ineligible for the DOSA program.

Work Ethic Camp. The work ethic camp is an alternative sentencing program that consists of at least 120 days and no more than 180 days of confinement, including a two-week period of transition training. This program allows a successful offender completing the program to convert the period of work ethic camp confinement at the rate of one day of work ethic camp confinement to three days of total standard confinement.

Although drug offenders, after special review of their circumstances, are eligible for the work ethic camp, an offender with prior convictions for any sex offenses or violent offenses is not eligible to participate in this particular program. An offender participating in a work ethic camp must be referred by the court and have received a sentencing term of total confinement ranging from a minimum of 16 months to a maximum of 36 months.

Some offenders are eligible for both the DOSA program and the WEC. Alien offenders may also participate in WEC.

County Supervised Community Option. Alternatives to total confinement are available for offenders with sentences of one year or less. These alternatives include the following sentence conditions that the court may order as substitutes for total confinement: (1) One day of partial confinement may be substituted for one day of total confinement; (2) in addition, for offenders convicted of nonviolent offenses only, eight hours of community service may be substituted for one day of total confinement, with a maximum conversion limit of 240 hours or 30 days. Community service hours must be completed within the period of community supervision or a time period specified by the court, which shall not exceed 24 months, pursuant to a schedule determined by the department.

Mitigating Circumstances. The standard range is presumed to be appropriate for the typical felony case. However, the law provides that in exceptional cases, a court has the discretion to depart from the standard range and may impose an exceptional sentence below the range (with a mitigating circumstance) or above the range (with an aggravating circumstance).

The Sentencing Reform Act lists a number of mitigating factors, for illustrative purposes only, which may be considered in determining whether an offender should receive an exceptional sentence. Several of these include:

- To a significant degree, the victim was an initiator, willing participant, aggressor, or provoker of the incident.
- Before detection, the defendant compensated, or made a good faith effort to compensate, the victim of the criminal conduct for any damage or injury sustained.
- The defendant committed the crime under duress, coercion, threat, or compulsion insufficient to constitute a complete defense but which significantly affected his or her conduct.

Drug Courts. Drug Court is a program that removes drug offenders from standard criminal procedures and forces them into treatment. There are currently drug courts in several counties including King, Pierce, Spokane, and Thurston counties.

The courts diverge from traditional courts by diverting non-violent drug criminals into court-ordered treatment programs rather than prison. The program allows people arrested for drug possession to choose an intensive, heavily supervised rehabilitation program in lieu of incarceration. In Drug Court, defendants agree to the facts of their arrest, then are required to participate in drug treatment, counseling, find work, meet with parole officers, attend weekly visits with a judge, and meet conditions set by a judge.

If they complete the program, the charges can be dropped. If a defendant fails, he or she can ultimately be sentenced at the top of the sentencing range and be jailed, but the courts typically give drug defendants more than one chance to reform.

With the incentive of keeping an offender's record clear of drug charges, the court pushes people with substance abuse problems into a year-long program of frequent drug tests and counseling.

The aim of the court is to encourage drug offenders into a productive, drug-free lifestyle.

Summary:

Community Supervision. The courts are authorize to order an offender, under a term of community supervision, to participate in drug or alcohol treatment if their crime is a result of a chemical dependency.

Affirmative Conditions. The courts are authorized to require an offender, found to have a chemical dependency which has contributed to their crime, to perform affirmative acts, such as participating in rehabilitative programs or taking drug or polygraph tests, as a condition of his or her sentence.

Pre-sentence Reports. Unless waived by the courts, the courts are required to order the Department of Corrections to perform a chemical dependency screening report before imposing a sentence upon a defendant who has been convicted of a controlled substance offense or where the court finds the offender has a chemical dependency which has contributed to his/her crime.

Drug Offender Sentencing Alternative. The Drug Offender Sentencing Alternative (DOSA) continues to allow a judge to waive imposition of an offender's sentence within the standard range.

The offender must spend the remainder of the midpoint of the standard range in community custody (instead of both community custody and community supervision) following incarceration which must also include some type of alcohol and substance abuse treatment that has been approved by the Division of Alcohol and Substance Abuse. Courts may continue to impose crime-related prohibitions as well as other conditions such as affirmative conditions as part of the offender's sentence.

An offender convicted of a violation of the uniform controlled substance act may be eligible for the DOSA if the current offense only involved a small quantity of drugs as determined by the court. An offender is prohibited to participate in this program if the offender has any prior as well as any current- convictions for a sex or violent felony offense.

The DOC is required to develop criteria for an offender's successful completion of the DOSA program by December 31, 1999. If the offender violates or fails to complete the DOSA sentence conditions he/she will have a violation hearing held by the DOC. If the offender is found guilty then he/she may be returned to total confinement for the balance of his/her remaining time of confinement (without court interference). The remaining sentence will be subject to all rules relating to earned early release time.

Alien offenders are ineligible for the DOSA program if they are subject to a deportation detainer or order.

Work Ethic Camp. Offenders with a current violation of the uniform controlled substance act (a drug offense) are ineligible for the work ethic camp. The 3:1 conversion is eliminated, however the sentencing range is expanded to allow offenders to participate in the work ethic camp if they have been referred by the court and have received a sentencing term of total confinement ranging from a minimum of 12 months and one day (instead of 16 months) to a maximum of 36 months.

Offenders who are eligible for the DOSA program are ineligible for the WEC. The DOC is authorized to remove an offender if the offender has a deportation detainer or order; or if the offender has participated in the WEC in the past.

County Supervised Community Option. A local option is created for community custody (or a county supervised community option) whereby jails may place nonviolent/nonsex offenders into alternative placements augmented by affirmative conditions.

Mitigating Circumstances. When imposing an exceptional sentence the term mitigating circumstances– is expanded to include violations of the uniform controlled substances act that are less onerous than the typical offense of its statutory definition (ie. such as when the current offense involved an attempted or actual sale of drugs in a quantity substantially smaller than what is usually typical for the offense) or when the circumstances of the offense reveal the offender occupied a low position in the drug distribution hierarchy.

Drug Courts. The term "drug court" is defined as a court that has special calendars or dockets designed to achieve a reduction in recidivism and substance abuse among nonviolent, substance abusing offenders by increasing their likelihood for successful rehabilitation through early, continuous, and intense judicially supervised treatment; mandatory periodic drug testing; and the use of appropriate sanctions and other rehabilitation services.

The Department of Social and Health Services must contract with counties operating drug courts for the provision of drug and alcohol treatment services. A minimum of 80 percent of the funds appropriated must be used for direct services to clients. A maximum of 10 percent of the funds appropriated must be used for administration and an outcome evaluation study. The study must include measures of recidivism and re-offense rates.

An appropriation of $4 million is provided to the Department of Social and Health Services for the funding of drug courts for the fiscal year ending June 30, 2001.

Fiscal Note: Requested on January 13, 1999.

Effective Date: Ninety days after adjournment of session in which bill is passed.
