Background:

The vessel registration chapter covers recreational vessel registration and includes statutes governing related subjects including the following:

- vessel dealer registration;
- confidential vessel registration;
- process for issuance of registration and allocation of funds;
- process for registration application;

- certificates of title;
- suspension of registration;
- records of purchase and sale; and
- vessel inspection.

A vessel is defined as every watercraft used, or capable of being used, as a means of transportation on the water, other than a seaplane.

Generally, no person may own or operate any vessel unless the vessel is registered and displays the proper documentation. There are certain exceptions such as vessels under 16 feet in length with no propulsion machinery or with machinery of ten or less horsepower and human-powered vessels. A person must produce proper vessel documentation when asked by law enforcement.

Except those violations specifically exempted, a violation of the chapter constitutes a misdemeanor offense punishable only by the following fines:

- up to $100 per vessel for the first offense;
- $200 per vessel for the second offense in the same year; and
- $400 per vessel for the third and subsequent offenses in the same year.

The maximum penalty and default amount for a class 2 civil infraction is $125. After the assessment of public safety and education (PSEA) fees and the subtraction of court fees, the remainder of the fine is given to the general fund of the jurisdiction issuing the infraction.
