The ability to charge premiums from recipients of medical care services is removed for children in households at or below 200 percent of the federal poverty level.

Appropriation: None.

Fiscal Note: Not requested.

Effective Date: The bill takes effect 90 days after adjournment of session in which bill is passed.

Testimony For: (Health Care) Charging premiums for children in households with income at or below 200 percent of the federal poverty level will result in families dropping out of publically funded health programs and children going without needed health care.

Testimony For: (Appropriations) This legislation effectively codifies a directive that the Governor sent to the secretary of the Department of Social and Health Services in January to revert the state from a six-month eligibility review to a 12-month eligibility review for children's health programs as well as stave off the premiums that would have been instituted. Last session, the Legislature passed legislation setting the goal in statute that we will be covering all children in Washington by 2010. The Governor supports that goal and believes that removing this barrier is one step closer to that goal. This bill is critical to protecting the health of Washington's children and a necessary step to covering all children by 2010. It is a well documented fact that charging Medicaid premiums results in children losing health coverage. Repealing the authority will not change premiums being charged of moderate family incomes enrolled in the State Children's Health Insurance Program (SCHIP) and has no fiscal cost associated with it. While the state passed the authority to charge Medicaid premiums in 2003, the authority has never been used and implementation has continually been delayed. It is time to make that delay permanent and remove the threat that premiums pose to children's health.
