hours of this training must be classroom instruction. A trainer certified by the Department of Licensing (Department) must report this training to the Department. The training may be waived for a person who was employed full-time as a peace officer not more than five years prior to applying for a license and who passes the security guard exam.

Security guards must also complete at least eight hours of post-assignment training. Four of these hours must be completed within the first six months of becoming licensed and the remaining four must be completed within the following six months. The eight-hour requirement increases by one hour every year until 2012 for a total of 15 hours of post-assignment training.

Summary of Substitute Bill:

The requirements for private security guard post-assignment training are modified. Instead of a one-hour increase each year until 2012, the training is separated into initial post-assignment training and annual refresher training. The initial post-assignment training is eight hours and the annual refresher training is four hours. For the refresher training, no more than one hour may focus directly on customer service-related skills, and the remaining three hours must focus on emergency response, including but not limited to knowledge of site post orders or life safety.

The time frame for completion of post-assignment training is changed. Instead of being based on the individual security guard's license date, the time frame is determined by whether the security guard was licensed in the first half of the year or the last half of the year. Those licensed in the first half of the year must complete their training by June 30 of the following year and those licensed in the second half of the year must complete their training by December 31 of the following year.

A security guard company may waive the pre-assignment training for security guards who transfer from another company and have appropriate records. Companies must retain all training records. Training records must contain a description of the topics covered, the name and signature of the trainer, and the name and signature of the security guard.

The Department must meet with interested parties to develop lists of suggested pre-assignment, post-assignment, and refresher training by rule.

EFFECT OF SENATE AMENDMENT(S):

Effect of Senate Amendment: The amendment allows companies to waive the initial postassignment training for guards who transfer from another company and have completed the training provided by their previous company. It deletes the waiver of presassignment training for guards transferring companies.

The amendment also makes a number of clarifying and other housekeeping amendments: creates a definition of "individual instruction," which means on-the-job training as well as formal education techniques and is distinguished from classroom instruction; reorganizes by deleting definitions and substantive requirements for the various types of training and placing them in the section that specifies training requirements; clarifies the responsibility of a department-certified trainer; makes language consistent; and corrects a subsection reference.

Appropriation: None.

Effective Date: The bill takes effect 90 days after adjournment of session in which bill is passed.

Staff Summary of Public Testimony:

(In support) This bill is important for the safety of our citizens. It is critical that security guards have the training to help us do the best job we can do. The training will make security guards professional. This is an agreed-upon bill that also helps with the administration. The industry has worked hard to come to this agreement. It will cost us a little money but it will also save us money.

(Opposed) None.

Persons Testifying: (In support) Representative Morrell, prime sponsor; Sergio Salinas, David Miles, and Heath Manley, Service Employees International Union 6; Michael Transue, Pierce County Security; and Rod Kauffman, Building Owners and Managers Association.

Persons Signed In To Testify But Not Testifying: None.
