The traditional method of legal publication is in newspapers. A state or local official may supplement publication with a radio or television broadcast if that official finds that the public interest would be served by doing so.

Legal notices broadcast on radio or television must be either read or shown. They may not reference a person who is a candidate for public office at the time of the notice. Broadcasts of notices may only be made by personnel of the radio or television station. Notices by political subdivisions may be made only by stations situated within the county of origin of the legal notice.

Any radio or television station broadcasting a legal notice must provide proof of publication by an affidavit from the station's manager, assistant manager, or program director. The station must keep a copy of the text of the notice for public inspection for six months after the broadcast.

Summary of Bill:

The requirement that radio or television broadcasts of legal notices must only be made by station personnel is removed. Affidavits from station personnel are no longer required. Written proof from the station is sufficient to prove the legal notice was given. The requirement to keep a text copy of the notice for public inspection for six months after the broadcast is repealed. Notices by political subdivisions may be made only by stations whose signal is received within the county of origin of the legal notice.
