SENATE COMMITTEE ON GOVERNMENTAL OPERATIONS

Staff: Samuel Brown (786-7470)

Background: Under Article II, section 41 of the Washington State Constitution (Constitution), no law or act that is subject to referendum may take effect until 90 days after the adjournment of the legislative session in which it is enacted. If, within 90 days of adjournment of the legislative session, a petition is submitted to the Secretary of State signed by a number of registered voters totaling at least 4 percent of the number of ballots cast in the most recent gubernatorial election, the law or act passed by the Legislature is referred to the people at the next general election for their approval or rejection. Based on the Secretary of State's data from the 2012 gubernatorial election, the certified signatures of 123,186 registered voters are required to place a referendum measure on the ballot in the next four years.

However, Article II, section 1(b) of the Constitution provides that laws as may be necessary for the immediate preservation of the public peace, health or safety, support of the state government, and its existing institutions are not subject to referendum and may therefore become effective immediately upon enactment or upon another specific date.

These constitutional provisions have given rise to the legislative practice of including what is known as an emergency clause in legislative bills intended to become effective immediately upon enactment. Such emergency clauses generally read as follows, "This act is necessary for the immediate preservation of the public peace, health, or safety, or support of the state government and its existing public institutions, and takes effect immediately." An emergency clause can be included among the original bill provisions or can later be added by amendment and may be passed by the affirmative vote of a majority of the members of each house of the Legislature.

Summary of Bill: An amendment to Article II, section 1(b) of the Constitution revising the provisions relating to the passage of emergency clauses in legislative acts will be submitted to the voters at the next general election for their approval and ratification or rejection. The constitutional amendment submitted to the voters will state the following:

- an emergency clause may only be introduced in the form of an amendment to a bill;
- passage of an amendment containing an emergency clause requires the affirmative vote of 60 percent of the members of each house of the Legislature; and
- emergency clauses included in appropriations bills authorizing expenditures for operating, transportation, or capital purposes are exempt from these requirements.

Appropriation: None.

Fiscal Note: Not requested.

Committee/Commission/Task Force Created: No.

Effective Date: Ninety days after adjournment of session in which bill is passed.
