2 "(d) Shall list on the residential customer's bill the 3 incremental cost attributable to net metering practices, if the 4 electric utility determines at any point that the credit provided to 5 net metering customers is shifting cost onto residential customers
6 who do not participate in net metering such that the rate impact 7 increases residential electric utility costs on average by twenty-8 five dollars or more per household per year"

EFFECT: If an electric utility determines net metering is shifting costs and increasing rates on average by $25 or more onto residential customers who do not participate in net metering, it must list the incremental cost attributable to net metering practices on the residential customers' bills.
