Background:

This analysis was prepared by non-partisan legislative staff for the use of legislative members in their deliberations. This analysis is not a part of the legislation nor does it constitute a statement of legislative intent.

The Department of Health (Department) operates a state vital records system for registering births, deaths, fetal deaths, marriages, divorce decrees, annulments, and separations. The vital records system must collect items recommended for collection by the federal government. Death certificates must include identifying information about the deceased person, the time and place of death, the circumstances and cause of death, and information about the person certifying the death. The Department and local registrars may issue certified copies of death certificates for deaths that occurred in Washington.

Summary of Substitute Bill:

The Department of Health must establish rules regarding the content and release of an abbreviated death certificate that includes identifying information about the decedent and information about the fact of the person's death, but excludes information related to the cause of death, the Social Security number, and the names of the decedent's parents. In cases in which a government agency requires the submission of a death certificate, the agency must recognize the use of the abbreviated death certificate if the cause of a person's death is not material to the filing.

Appropriation: None.

Fiscal Note: Available.

Effective Date: The bill takes effect 90 days after adjournment of the session in which the bill is passed.

Staff Summary of Public Testimony:

(In support) This bill is about identity theft which can come from the information currently on the full death certificate. Death certificates are frequently required to be filed with the government. Death certificates have a lot of personal information that is not pertinent to what the death certificate is used for such as Social Security number, place of birth, and parents' names. The amount of information raises concerns about identity theft and identity fraud. While the information that this bill would remove from the death certificate may be convenient to have, in the vast majority of cases the information is not necessary. This bill does not do away with the standard form death certificate, but just gives citizens an option if they would like to keep their information private.

(Opposed) None.
