Background:

Various state agencies have done work around promoting equity and reducing disparities. Some examples include:

- the Governor's Interagency Coordinating Council on Health Disparities (Council), which promotes and facilitates communication, coordination, and collaboration among relevant state agencies and communities of color, and the private sector and public sector, to address health disparities;

This analysis was prepared by non-partisan legislative staff for the use of legislative members in their deliberations. This analysis is not a part of the legislation nor does it constitute a statement of legislative intent.

- the State Board of Health conducts Health Impact Reviews on any state legislative or budgetary change, which must consider the direct impacts on health disparities as well as changes in the social determinants of health;
- the Department of Children, Youth, and Families has set as initial priority strategies in their work around racial equity, diversity, and inclusion, including applying a racial equity lens in their work; and
- the Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion Council works collaboratively with the Office of Financial Management (OFM) and the Department of Enterprise Services to develop recommendations to build a diverse, inclusive, and culturally competent workforce.

In January 2018, the Council issued a state policy action plan to eliminate health disparities. One recommendation in that plan was for the Governor to issue a policy to create a comprehensive initiative to promote equity in state government. The Council recommended that the initiative include certain aspects, such as actions to improve access to information and services for people who speak languages other than English, collect disaggregated data to raise awareness of inequities that exist in the state's communities, create performance metrics and track progress in making state government more equitable, ensure that diverse communities have a voice in state government decisions, and increase the diversity of the state workforce.
