Background: Peace Officer Certification. The Criminal Justice Training Commission (CJTC) provides training and educational programs to law enforcement, corrections officers, and other public safety professionals in Washington. This includes the Basic Law Enforcement Training Academy as well as advanced training. The CJTC also certifies and, when necessary, decertifies peace officers.

All general authority peace officers, including local law enforcement officers and those employed by the state agencies, are required to obtain and maintain certification. An applicant must submit to a background investigation including a criminal history check, verification of citizenship or lawful permanent resident status, a psychological examination, and a polygraph or similar assessment.

There is no certification requirement for corrections officers.

Basic Corrections Officer Training. Corrections officers are required to engage in basic corrections training that complies with standards adopted by the CJTC. The training must be successfully completed within the first six months of employment, unless otherwise extended or waived by the CJTC. The program is 160 hours, and includes course topics in areas such as: combating manipulation, legal issues, professionalism, emotional survival and peer support, transport, booking, communications, and searches.

Summary of Bill: Corrections officers must obtain certification from the CJTC. Corrections officers include corrections agency employees whose primary job function is to provide for the custody, safety, and security of adult prisoners in jails and detention facilities, and who are subject to basic corrections officer training requirements. For purposes of the certification requirement, corrections officers do not include individuals employed by state agencies. The requirement to obtain certification applies to new and existing corrections officers. As a prerequisite to certification, a corrections officer must authorize the release to the CJTC of his or her personnel files, termination papers, criminal investigation files, and any other documents or information directly related to certification. Documentation related to correction officer certification or termination of employment are exempt from public disclosure. The CJTC may require local corrections agencies that make a conditional offer of employment to an applicant as a corrections officer to administer a background investigation including a criminal history check, verification of citizenship or lawful permanent resident status, a psychological examination, and a polygraph or similar assessment, for use in determining the applicant's suitability for employment as a corrections officer.

An employing agency must notify the CJTC within 15 days of any termination of a corrections officer. The CJTC may request additional documentation from the agency if necessary to determine whether the termination provides grounds for revocation. The CJTC may deny or revoke a corrections officer's certification after written notice and a hearing if requested. If a hearing is requested, the hearing must be scheduled 90 to 180 days after the statement of charges is communicated to the officer, unless extended by agreement.

A corrections officer whose certification is denied or revoked may not be certified as a peace officer, and a peace officer whose certification is denied or revoked may not be certified as a corrections officer, without first satisfying the requirements of eligibility for certification or reinstatement of certification. Standards are established for the reinstatement of certification.

Basic corrections training must be at least ten weeks in length for corrections officers hired on or after July 1, 2021.

Appropriation: None.

Fiscal Note: Available.

Creates Committee/Commission/Task Force that includes Legislative members: No.

Effective Date: Ninety days after adjournment of session in which bill is passed.

Staff Summary of Public Testimony (Law & Justice): PRO: Back in 2012, the Legislature established a higher standard for law enforcement by creating a background check, psychological exam, and polygraph exam and basic training in order to be certified by the CJTC. We do not have that requirement for local corrections officers but this bill would provide it. The CJTC recommends a ten-week academy be established. The four weeks at CJTC is good but not enough to adequately train corrections officers. It should also include wellness training. It will improve the skills of corrections officers. Corrections officers deal with offenders with mental health issues, addiction issues and other issues. We need to give crisis intervention training to our corrections officers.

Persons Testifying (Law & Justice): PRO: Timothy Grisham, Washington Association of County Officials; James McMahan, Washington Association of Sheriffs & Police Chiefs; Derek Zable, Criminal Justice Training Commission; John Snaza, Thurston County Sheriff.

Persons Signed In To Testify But Not Testifying (Law & Justice): No one.

Staff Summary of Public Testimony (Ways & Means): PRO: Washington is an outlier in the low amount of training provided to corrections officers. The ten-week training provided in this bill is critical. We hope that this additional training will improve the life expectancy of corrections officers. Our members enthusiastically support this. There has been a lack of training for corrections officers, and this bill would provide a similar framework as peace officers.

Persons Testifying (Ways & Means): PRO: Timothy Grisham, Deputy Director, Washington Association of County Officials; Derek Zable, Criminal Justice Training Commission.

Persons Signed In To Testify But Not Testifying (Ways & Means): No one.
