agreement. The disclosure statement requires the seller to answer (1) "yes," (2) "no," or (3) "don't know" on a list of items, and if the questions require, the seller is given space to provide more details. The seller disclosure statement includes the following categories:

Summary of Substitute Bill:

For residential real estate transactions entered into on or after January 1, 2022, the seller disclosure statement is amended to include questions about whether the property currently has Internet access and who the provider is. The seller may answer by providing the information or by checking the "don't know" boxes.

The substitute bill requires disclosure for real estate transactions entered into on or after January 1, 2022.

Appropriation: None.

Fiscal Note: Not requested.

Effective Date of Substitute Bill: The bill takes effect 90 days after adjournment of the session in which the bill is passed.

Staff Summary of Public Testimony:

(In support) It is more important than ever for home buyers to know whether high-speed Internet access is available. Many people assume that a home has high-speed Internet when it does not. Buyers should not have to go to a grocery store to access the Internet. Sellers have the option of checking "don't know," but adding the question will make both sellers and buyers think about Internet access in the home-buying process. Internet availability and disclosure align with our state's goals, and the state offers an easy way for anyone to test broadband speed.

(Opposed) None.

(Other) Realtors would love for everyone to have high-speed Internet access, and it is appropriate to include questions about Internet service on the seller disclosure form. The language should be modified to factual questions that a seller is able to answer.

Persons Testifying: (In support) Representative Eslick, prime sponsor; and Russ Elliott, Washington State Broadband Office.

(Other) Bill Clarke, Washington REALTORS.

Persons Signed In To Testify But Not Testifying: None.
