

WAC 240-06-120 Protection of public records. The public records officer shall take all reasonable steps and impose appropriate conditions on the inspection and copying of public records so as to protect such records and to preserve the integrity of other proper activities of the office. Inspection or copying shall be denied and records shall be withdrawn if the person inspecting or copying the records is engaging in conduct likely to damage or substantially disorganize them or so as to interfere excessively with other essential functions of the office or in disregard of conditions imposed by the public records officer.
