Staff: Barbara McLain 786-7153.

Background: In 1988, the United States granted federal veteran status to certain members of the merchant marine who served in World War II. In 1977, the federal government had granted similar status to members of the Women's Air Forces Service Pilots (WASPS). Currently, members of these two groups are not officially recognized as veterans by the state of Washington.

A number of benefits are available to individuals who are recognized by the state as veterans. For example, veterans meeting certain conditions may receive up to five years' service credit in the calculation of their retirement benefits. Veterans and their families in need or the families of deceased veterans in need can receive aid from the Veterans' Assistance Fund, a relief program administered at the county level. In addition, disabled veterans or veterans who were prisoners of war may receive special vehicle licenses at no charge, free state hunting and fishing licenses, and free admission to and free use of campsites in state parks.

Summary of Bill: Members of the merchant marine who served in World War II and members of the WASPS are added to the state's definition of "veteran." In order to qualify for state veteran benefits, a member of one of these groups must have an honorable discharge or a discharge for physical reasons with an honorable record. Members of the merchant marine must have been employed during the period of armed conflict December 7, 1941, to August 15, 1945, and must have been employed by the War Shipping Administration, the Office of Defense Transportation, the U.S. Army Transport Service, or the Naval Transportation Service.

The statute concerning membership in the Soldiers' Home or Colony or the Veterans' Home is modified to include a definition of "veteran." The definition is the same as the amended definition above.

Fiscal Note: Available.

Effective Date: Ninety days after adjournment of session in which bill is passed.

Testimony For: (State Government) The companion measure to this bill was passed earlier by this committee; it is hoped that the committee will pass it again. Merchant marines are pleased that the WASPS are included in this version. Six states have authorized similar status for these groups. The bill will not provide these people with many benefits, but it does honor them. It was surprising that the other bill ran into a stumbling block in the Appropriations Committee; the bill should cost very little. The federal government has taken the step to recognize these people as veterans. It is high time that the State did the same. Most of these people are 70 to 80 years old and can't wait much longer. All this bill does is grant recognition.
