Background: Existing legislation authorizes management of state park lands to: (1) maintain and enhance ecological, aesthetic, and recreational purposes; (2) preserve and maintain mature and old growth forests which may also be used for interpretive purposes; (3) protect cultural and historic resources, locations and artifacts which may be used for interpretive purposes; (4) provide recreational opportunities to the public; (5) preserve and maintain habitat; and (6) encourage public participation in the formation and implementation of park policies and programs.

There is an increasing demand from the public for environmental education. Park users are requesting interpretation programs. During public hearings on Ecology's Environment 2010 project, the public repeatedly commented on the need for environmental education.

Summary of Bill: The State Parks and Recreation Commission may provide environmental interpretation activities to visitors. Those activities may: (1) explain ecosystems; (2) explain the relationship between human behaviors and the environment; and (3) offer information to increase citizen appreciation and stewardship of the environment.

The commission may consult with, solicit assistance from and enter into agreements with private and public entities who are interested in conserving and interpreting Washington's environment. The commission will not permit commercial advertising in state parks as a condition of an environmental interpretation contractual agreement. The commission will keep an accounting of all monetary gifts received in support of environmental interpretation.

Fiscal Note: Requested on January 17, 1991.

Effective Date: Ninety days after adjournment of the session in which the bill is passed.
