Background: The practice of acupuncture is regulated by law and persons holding themselves out as acupuncturists or as certified acupuncturists must be certified by the Department of Health. Acupuncture is principally a health care service based on traditional Oriental medical theory by treating specific acupuncture points with needles and other modalities.

There is currently no exemption provided from the requirement of certification for out-of-state acupuncturists on sabbatical in this state.

The acupuncture regulatory law is scheduled for termination on July 1, 1991, and repeal on July 1, 1992, under the Sunset law.

Summary of Bill: Acupuncturists from out-of-state on sabbatical in this state shall be granted inactive license status and pay a reduced license fee.

The scheduled Sunset termination and repeal dates for the acupuncture regulatory law are repealed.

Fiscal Note: Available.

Appropriation: Yes.

Effective Date: Ninety days after adjournment of session in which bill is passed.

Testimony For: (Health Care): The use of acupuncture in treating the withdrawal symptoms and detoxification of patients with alcohol and drug dependency is reported to be quite favorable, and in some cases impressive. According to studies, patients who were treated expressed significantly less need for alcohol and opiates. There is a need to recognize the role that acupuncturists can play by employing this therapy for alcoholics and drug addicted patients seeking treatment. The Acupuncture Practice Act should be continued, as it is scheduled for Sunset termination and repeal shortly.

(Appropriations): Acupuncture can be an important part of substance abuse treatment. There is some evidence that it can help individuals overcome methadone dependency. This bill will enable King County to incorporate acupuncture into its substance abuse treatment programs.

Testimony Against: (Health Care): None.

(Appropriations): None.

Witnesses: (Health Care): Representative Locke, prime sponsor (pro); Mark Imlay, Acupuncture Association of Washington (pro); Paul Karsten, American Association of Acupuncture and Oriental Medicine (pro); Mel Sorensen, Washington Physicians Service and Blue Cross of Washington/Alaska; Ken Stark, Department of Social and Health Services (pro); and Jeff Larsen, Washington Association of Naturopathic Physicians.

(Appropriations): Steven Freng, King County Alcoholism and Substance Abuse Services.
