Background: The Department of Corrections six year plan reflects a significant need to build additional prisons. The design and construction of these new facilities can take into consideration an inmate work force that could be productively expanded beyond the numbers currently working.

The Department of Corrections provides inmates work programs through the Division of Correctional Industries. The Division of Correctional Industries develops and implements programs that offer inmates employment, work experience and training and reduces cost of administering and housing inmates. To achieve these goals, Correctional Industries operates five classes of work programs. These program are referred to as Class I through Class V programs.

All inmates working in Class I through IV employment, receive financial compensation for their work that ranges from $30 per month for Class IV work, to the prevailing wage for offenders employed in Class I jobs. Offenders working in Class V correctional jobs receive no financial compensation. Class V jobs are court ordered community work that is preformed for the benefit of the community without financial compensation. Competition among inmates for class I and Class II jobs, motivates inmates to keep their jobs and serves as an incentive for inmates to produce high quality products. Class I employees currently must pay 15 percent of their wages toward their incarceration costs. All funds collected from an inmate's wages go in the general fund.

Correctional Industries job programs do not allow offenders to use their wages to pay for cells containing enhanced modular amenities, or other amenities provided as behavioral or production incentives. In addition proposed prison capital constructions plans do not include the construction of prison cells that can accommodate an incentive program.

Lack of adequate space for correctional industries programs seriously limits the number of inmates that can work in skills oriented jobs.

Summary of Bill: The Department of Corrections must develop an implementation plan for prison industry space at Clallam Bay Corrections Center, McNeil Island Corrections Center, and the proposed 1024-bed medium security prison. The implementation plan will include sufficient space and design elements to support a target of 25 percent of the total inmates in Class I programs and 25 percent of the total inmates in Class II programs. The prison industries design space plan must take into consideration the maintenance of an adequate inmate workforce for daily operations of the prison. The prison design plans for Clallam Bay, McNeal Island, and the 1024-bed facility must be consistent with the plan mandated in the act, yet not result in the delay of the construction or modification of the prisons.

The plan must also describe an incentive program for inmates working in Class I and Class II programs. The incentive program plan description will include: how inmates will be able to earn higher wages based on performance and production; rules for recovering a specified amount from inmate wages that will be returned to the department to pay for the cost of prison operations; and special criteria for including handicapped inmates. The plan must identify any legal or operational obstacles involved with implementing the design and incentive program and describe possible solutions. The completed plan must be submitted to the appropriate committees of the Legislature and the governor by October 1, 1991.

Fiscal Note: Available. New fiscal note requested on March 8, 1991.

Effective Date: The bill contains an emergency clause and takes effect immediately.

Testimony For: (Human Services) Correctional programs that enhance the quality of life, provide educational opportunities, and reduce idleness in the prison will benefit the overall prison environment and are productive for inmates. Paying inmates a reasonable wage in order to encourage obtaining job skills, and charging inmates some of their own housing costs, will allow the inmate to gain marketable skills and keep some earnings. Improving living conditions in the state's prisons will contribute to less recidivism and be more likely to have positive results than the often brutal situation which exists in some facilities.

(Capital Facilities & Financing) Same as Committee on Human Services.

Testimony Against: (Human Services) None.

(Capital Facilities & Financing) The state should be mindful of Class I prison industries competing against the private sector for jobs.
