Brief Description: Creating enrollment options for children of school employees.

HB 1348 - DIGEST

Finds that many teachers must live some distance from the schools in which they teach.

Finds that some teachers must juggle the demands of teaching young students, raising young children, and commuting long distances on increasingly congested roads.

Finds that school districts could provide a great boon to these teachers by giving them the option of enrolling their school-age children in the school and school district in which the teacher works.

Declares an intent to permit the children of teachers to attend school in the school or district where their parent teaches.
