EFFECT: The requirement that the legislative accountability board review the performance measures of all executive branch state agencies not less than every five years is removed. Instead, the legislative accountability board must review the performance measures of selected agencies according to a five year work plan developed by the board. The list of criteria to be considered in a performance measure review is made permissive rather than mandatory. Removed from the criteria to be considered in a performance measure review are a review of how performance data are reported to and used by the legislature in policy development and resource allocation, and a determination of whether targeted funding investments and established priorities of government actually produce the intended and expected services and benefits.
