Background:

Medical Malpractice

Medical malpractice actions are civil tort actions for the recovery of damages for injury or death resulting from the provision of health care. There are three grounds on which a health care provider may be found liable in a medical malpractice action:

- The health care provider failed to follow the standard of care;
- The health care provider promised that the injury suffered would not occur; or
- The injury resulted from health care to which the patient did not consent.

The statute of limitations for medical malpractice actions has varying time periods depending on the circumstances, but the general rule is that an action must be brought within three years of the alleged act or omission or within one year of discovery that the injury was caused by the alleged act or omission. There is no requirement that a plaintiff provide a defendant with prior notice of his or her intent to institute a suit.

Mandatory Mediation for Medical Malpractice

Medical malpractice claims are subject to mandatory mediation in accordance with court rules adopted by the supreme court. The court rule provides deadlines for commencing mediation proceedings, the process for appointing a mediator, and the procedure for conducting mediation proceedings. The rule allows mandatory mediation to be waived upon petition of any party that mediation is not appropriate.

Arbitration

Parties to a dispute may voluntarily agree in writing to enter into arbitration to resolve the dispute. A procedural framework for conducting the arbitration proceeding is provided in statute, including provisions relating to appointment of an arbitrator, attorney representation, witnesses, depositions, and awards. Courts have authority to confirm arbitration awards, or modify or vacate arbitration awards under certain circumstances.

Mandatory Arbitration

Parties to a lawsuit may be required to participate in mandatory arbitration in some instances. Mandatory arbitration generally is required in civil actions where the sole relief requested does not exceed $35,000. Anyone agreed to by the parties may be an arbitrator. If agreement is not reached, the court will appoint an arbitrator who must be a retired judge or a lawyer with at least five years membership in the bar. An award by an arbitrator may be appealed to the superior court. The superior court will hear the appeal "de novo," which means that the court will conduct a trial on all issues of fact and law as if the arbitration had not occurred. Amounts awarded on appeal are not subject to any dollar limits.

Summary of Second Engrossed Bill:

Medical malpractice actions are subject to a requirement of 90 days prior notice to the defendant of the intent to file suit and a requirement that the parties participate in mandatory mediation unless the claim is subject to arbitration.

A medical malpractice action may not be commenced unless the plaintiff has provided the defendant with 90 days prior notice of the intention to file a suit. The 90-day notice requirement does not apply if the defendant's name is unknown at the time of filing the complaint. If the notice is served within 90 days of the expiration of the statute of limitations, the time for commencing the action must be extended for 90 days from the date of service of the notice.

Medical malpractice claims are subject to mandatory mediation unless the action is subject to mandatory arbitration or the parties agree, after the claim arises, to submit the claim to arbitration. The supreme court rules implementing the mandatory mediation requirement may not provide any other exceptions to the mandatory mediation requirement.
