Staff: John Dziedzic (786-7784)

Background: Under current law, if a worker knowingly gives false information in obtaining more worker compensation benefits than he or she is entitled to, the worker is guilty of theft. Depending on the amount of the wrongfully obtained benefit, the offense is classified as either a gross misdemeanor (up to $250); a class C felony (from $250 to $1,500); or a class B felony (over $1,500).

Any entity other than an injured worker that knowingly participates in fraudulently causing an excess payment of worker compensation benefits commits a class C felony. It is also a class C felony for an employer to knowingly fail to pay the proper worker compensation premium.

Summary of Bill: If a worker knowingly gives false information in an industrial insurance claim, it is a class C felony; unless the worker wrongfully receives $1,000 or more, in which case, it is a class B felony. A worker convicted of either offense must also pay restitution, and a penalty of 100 percent of the benefits wrongfully received, plus interest on the excess benefits received and the penalty imposed.

The penalty for any entity other than an injured worker that participates in fraudulently causing an overpayment of worker compensation benefits is a class C felony, unless the entity wrongfully receives $1,000 or more, in which case it is a class B felony.

The entity that wrongfully receives an excess payment must also pay restitution, penalties, and interest.
