Background:

Unemployment benefits are payable to eligible unemployed workers. An individual is eligible to receive benefits if he or she meets certain eligibility criteria. The individual's initial eligibility is based on whether he or she worked at least 680 hours in covered employment in his or her base year, and separated from employment through no fault of his or her own or quit work for good cause. The individual's continuing eligibility is based on whether he or she is able to work and is actively searching for suitable work.

Currently, there are two programs in which an individual is not required to meet continuing eligibility criteria. These criteria do not apply to eligible unemployed workers who are receiving training benefits or who are enrolled in training approved by the Commissioner of the Employment Security Department (Department). In lieu of these criteria, the workers must be enrolled in and making satisfactory progress in approved training.

In 1989 and 1990, Washington and Massachusetts participated in federally-sponsored demonstration projects to test the ability of the employment security and economic development systems to help unemployed workers start businesses. To receive self-employment allowances in lieu of regular unemployment benefits, participants in the demonstration projects were required to participate in self-employment assistance activities on a full-time basis. Continuing eligibility criteria did not apply to the participants.

In 1993, Congress authorized all states to create similar self-employment assistance programs for certain unemployed workers. Seven states (Delaware, Maine, Maryland, New Jersey, New York, Oregon, and Pennsylvania) are currently operating such programs.

Summary of Amended Bill:

The Legislature finds that a self-employment assistance program would assist unemployed individuals and create new businesses and job opportunities in Washington. The Employment Security Department must inform individuals who are likely to exhaust regular unemployment benefits of the opportunity to enroll in self-employment assistance programs.

An unemployed individual is eligible to participate in a self-employment assistance program if he or she:

- Is otherwise eligible for regular unemployment benefits;
- Has been identified as likely to exhaust regular benefits; and
- Is enrolled in a self-employment assistance program approved by the Commissioner.

Self-employment activities include entrepreneurial training, business counseling, and technical assistance. Sources of such activities include community colleges, work force investment boards, or other organizations.

An individual participating in a self-employment assistance program receives regular unemployment benefits. However, the individual does not have to meet continuing eligibility requirements for regular unemployment benefits for the first 52 weeks of the individual's participation in a program. Continuing eligibility requirements are being available for work, actively searching for work, and not refusing to accept suitable work.

An individual who fails to participate in a self-employment program is disqualified from continuing in the program. An individual may not compete directly with their separating employer.

Appropriation: None.

Fiscal Note: Available.

Effective Date of Amended Bill: The bill takes effect January 1, 2008.

Staff Summary of Public Testimony: (Commerce & Labor)

(In support) This bill would create a wonderful opportunity for individuals who are likely to exhaust benefits to participate in self-employment activities and start businesses of their own. We worked with the business community to address their concerns. One change ensures that participants will not compete with their former employers. The fiscal impact of this bill is minimal.

This bill creates a program with the potential to have profound impacts on individuals. A small number of people who are entrepreneurial can have success if they can learn business skills. This option should be available to them.

(Opposed) This bill is unnecessary. There are plenty of small business development tools that are already available. There is not a lot of evidence that these programs are effective. The Employment Security Department is in dire financial straits. Other programs would be better given the Department's financial position.
