Background: Under Washington law, the State Board of Education (SBE) establishes high school graduation requirements for students. Current SBE graduation requirements include two and one-half credits in social studies. One credit must be in United States history and government, which must include the study of the U.S. Constitution. One-half credit must be in Washington state history and government, which includes the study of the Washington Constitution. One credit must be in contemporary world history, geography, and problems.

State law encourages any course in Washington state history and government to include information on the culture, history, and government of the American Indian people who were the first inhabitants of the state. State law also requires the study of the U.S. and Washington Constitutions as a prerequisite to graduation from public and private high schools. Beginning with the 2008-09 school year, school districts must require students in the fourth or fifth
