House Committee on Commerce & Labor
Senate Committee on Labor, Commerce & Consumer Protection

Background:

The Department of Labor and Industries (Department) is responsible for licensing electrical contractors and certifying electricians. An electrical contractor license is required for a business to do most electrical work. Certification is required for a worker participating in the electrical construction trade. Violations are subject to a penalty.

The Department may inspect a job site to determine whether electrical contractors and electricians have complied with the requirements for licensing, certification, and installation. The inspector may choose to inspect a particular job site or may be requested by a third party to inspect a particular site.

The Department may audit an electrical contractor's records in order to verify the hours of experience submitted by an electrical trainee to the Department under certain circumstances.

There is no statutory authority for the Director of the Department (Director) to issue subpoenas related to its enforcement activities. However, subpoena authority is given to the Director and the Director's representatives in the context of registered contractors to enforce the production and examination of a list of the registered contractors working on the property, contracts between the registered contractor and any suppliers or subcontractors, and any other information necessary to enforce contract registration. The subpoena may only be issued if the contractor fails to provide the information when requested. The superior court may enforce such subpoenas.

Summary:

This analysis was prepared by non-partisan legislative staff for the use of legislative members in their deliberations. This analysis is not a part of the legislation nor does it constitute a statement of legislative intent.

The Director and the Director's representatives are authorized to issue subpoenas to enforce the production and examination of any information needed to enforce the law relating to electricians and electrical installations if there is reason to believe a violation has taken place.

The subpoena may only be issued if the person to which the electrician and electrical installation law applies fails to provide the requested information.

The subpoena and the request for information must describe the possible violation, cite the relevant law, and explain how the information being requested or subpoenaed is reasonably related to the possible violation.

The superior court is authorized to enforce such a subpoena.
