Background:

The Division of Child Support (DCS) of the Department of Social and Health Services provides services to establish, modify, and collect child support. The DCS must provide services if a family is receiving Temporary Assistance to Needy Families (assistance). The parent receiving assistance assigns his or her right to child support to the DCS as reimbursement for the assistance. In those cases, the DCS may enforce a child support order previously established by the court or establish an order administratively. If the DCS is enforcing an order established by the court, the court generally retains jurisdiction to modify that support order. Except under certain circumstances, a child support order may be modified only upon a showing of a substantial change of circumstances.

In cases where assistance is being paid for the child, the DCS may file an action to modify a child support order if the support order is 25 percent or more below the appropriate support amount established in the standard calculation, and the reasons for deviation from that amount are not set forth in findings.

Summary of Substitute Bill:

The DCS may file an action to modify or adjust a child support order if assistance is being paid for the child and the order is at least 25 percent below or above the standard calculation. In non-assistance cases, the DCS may file an action to modify or adjust an order when it meets the 25 percent threshold requirement and services have been requested by another state or jurisdiction or by a party to the action. The DCS may also seek to modify or adjust a child support order at the intervals required by federal law, if the 25 percent threshold is met and the case meets the DCS review criteria.

If testimony other than an affidavit is required in any modification proceeding, the court must permit a party or witness to testify by telephone or other electronic means, unless good cause is shown.

Appropriation: None.

Fiscal Note: Available.

Effective Date: The bill takes effect 90 days after adjournment of the session in which the bill is passed.

Staff Summary of Public Testimony:

(In support) This bill simply clarifies the DCS standing in non-assistance cases. The DCS authority to proceed in non-assistance cases is conditioned on a request from a party to the order. The bill is also in response to feedback the DCS has received from parents who want to be able to testify by telephone at court hearings. Under the Uniform Interstate Family Support Act, testimony by telephone is already allowed so this bill simply extends the provision to Washington parents. The bill also updates the statute to bring it in compliance with federal law. The statute implies that the DCS can only seek a modification if the order is below the standard calculation. The DCS must seek a modification if the order goes up or down. The DCS seeks fair and appropriate orders. The federal law requires states to have a reasonable, quantifiable formula to determine if the DCS will seek modification in all cases. The federal government does not specify whether the formula must be in statute or rule.

(Opposed) None.
