Background: The Washington Horse Racing Commission (Commission) is responsible for licensing and regulating horse racing in Washington. The Commission licenses horse racing associations, racing facilities, and the employees who participate in horse racing. The Commission also schedules and supervises race meets. Betting or wagering on a horse race is lawful in Washington only if it is by the pari-mutuel method, which is a betting system where the bets of a particular type are pooled, taxes and commissions are removed, and payoffs are calculated by sharing the pool among all of the winning bets.

The Commission funds its operating expenses through a pari-mutuels tax, where it collects a percentage of the pari-mutuel wagering daily gross receipts. A licensee operating races must withhold and pay to the commission a percentage of the gross receipts from its in-state pari-mutuel machines. Those receipts are deposited into the Washington Horse Racing Commission Operating Account.

The Commission Operating Account is funded through the pari-mutuels tax, horse racing licenses and fees, gifts, grants, and endowments. Monies in the account may be spent only after appropriation. Gifts, grants, and endowments must be expended according to the terms of the gift, grant, or endowment. Otherwise, monies in the Commission Operating Account must be used for the Commission's operating expenses. If there are sufficient funds in the account to cover the Commission's operating expenses, the Commission may spend up to
