Background: Employees of the Department of Corrections and the Department of Natural Resources who are assaulted by an offender at work and miss work because of their injuries may receive supplemental reimbursement. The employee is ineligible for reimbursement if the assault is attributable to the employee's negligence, misconduct, or violation of any employment rules or conditions. The reimbursements are considered wages or salary. An employee has no contract right to continue receiving reimbursement if the Legislature discontinues this reimbursement program or repeals the law authorizing reimbursement.

Summary of Bill (Recommended Substitute): Corrections and Department of Natural Resources employees who are injured by an offender assault may receive supplemental benefits in addition to the time-loss benefits injured workers receive from the Department of Labor and Industries. Staff Summary of Public Testimony on Original Bill (Law & Justice): PRO: Corrections facilities are dangerous places to work. Staff at these facilities can be attacked without warning and may be seriously injured. The purpose of this bill is to extend the time past the current 365 day limit for supplemental wage benefits in case it takes longer than a year for the staff member to recover from an on-the-job assault by an offender. Just today, a staff member at the Clallam Bay facility was seriously injured and taken to a hospital for treatment. In the past few years Department of Corrections data shows the following number of staff who have sustained inmate assault injuries that lasted longer than a year: in 2013, four staff ; in 2014, eight staff; in 2015, seven staff.

Staff Summary of Public Testimony (Ways & Means): PRO: Corrections staff work tirelessly inside our prisons to keep our communities safe. Staff work with inmates daily. Unfortunately, physical assaults are commonplace. Thankfully many of these incidents do not result in life threatening injuries, but some staff do require over a year to recover. In the past three years, 18 staff have been injured so severely that it took longer than one year to recover and return back to work. This can make a financial difference for families.
