House Committee on Early Learning & Human Services
Senate Committee on Human Services, Mental Health & Housing

Background:

In Washington mandatory reporting laws require certain people to report suspected child abuse or child neglect to the Department of Social and Health Services (DSHS) or law enforcement. Practitioners, medical examiners, law enforcement officers, professional school personnel, registered or licensed nurses, social service counselors, psychologists, pharmacists, the Department of Early Learning employees, licensed or certified child care providers, juvenile probation officers, placement and liaison specialists, responsible living skills program staff, DSHS employees, HOPE center staff, the Office of the Family and Children's Ombudsman (Ombuds) employees, any volunteers in the Ombuds's office, and host home providers are all examples of mandated reporters.

Mandated reporting requirements are also extended to the Department of Corrections personnel, guardians ad litem, court appointed special advocates, any person in an official supervisory capacity with a profit or nonprofit organization, administrative, academic or athletic departmental employees of institutions of higher learning, or any adult who has reasonable cause to believe that a child who resides with the adult is a victim of abuse or neglect. Any other person who has reason to believe that child abuse or child neglect has occurred may report that information.

Upon suspecting child abuse or child neglect, the mandated reporter must make a report within 48 hours. Failing to report suspected child abuse or child neglect within 48 hours is a gross misdemeanor.

The DSHS must make available on its public website a downloadable and printable poster that includes the requirements for mandated reporters of child abuse and neglect. The poster must be at least 8.5 inches by 11 inches with all information on one side and made available in both English and Spanish. Organizations that include employees or volunteers subject to the mandatory reporter requirements must clearly display this poster in a common area.
