Background: Substance Use Disorders. A substance use disorder is a condition that occurs when the recurrent use of alcohol or drugs causes clinically and functionally significant impairment. Recommended treatment for a substance use disorder may vary, but includes outpatient treatment, medication-assisted therapy, or residential treatment. The kinds of available treatment to an individual may vary depending upon the person's type of health coverage:

- Persons covered by Medicaid receive coverage through managed care organizations which oversee the delivery of mental health and substance use disorder services for adults and children in a particular geographic region. Substance use disorder services are determined upon assessment of the client and may include outpatient treatment, withdrawal management services, residential treatment, and opiate substitution treatment services.
- The federal Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act requires most individual and small group market health plans to provide coverage for mental health and substance use disorder treatment services. Under state rules implementing the federal requirement, this coverage must include outpatient and inpatient care to evaluate, diagnose, and treat a substance use disorder. State law also requires most state-regulated health plans to cover the treatment of substance use disorders as provided by an approved treatment program.
- State employees receive health care through the Public Employees Benefits Board, an entity within the Health Care Authority (HCA). Coverage options include a managed care organization plan and a self-insured health plan, known as the Uniform Medical Plan. Both plans cover outpatient services and residential treatment for substance use disorders.

Utilization Management. Utilization management (UM) is the evaluation of medical necessity, appropriateness, and efficiency in the use of health care services. Prior authorization or prospective review is a form of UM conducted at the outset of care in order to eliminate or reduce unnecessary services. The outcome of prior authorization can be approval of care recommended by an evaluating provider, denial of coverage for recommended care, or the placement of limitations on recommended care.

American Society of Addiction Medicine Criteria and Levels of Care. ASAM is a professional society of addiction medicine professionals, including physicians, clinicians, and associated professionals. ASAM produces educational materials and reference manuals to guide the practice of substance use disorder treatment. The ASAM criteria is a widely-used, comprehensive set of guidelines for placement, continued stay, and transfer or discharge of clients who have substance use disorders and co-occurring conditions. These criteria are used by trained and licensed substance use disorder professionals to determine an appropriate ASAM level of care for a client on a continuum that runs from early intervention to, in increasing levels of intensity, outpatient services, intensive outpatient/partial hospitalization, residential/inpatient services, and medically managed intensive inpatient services.

Use of ASAM Criteria in Washington. The Office of the Insurance Commissioner (OIC) has adopted ASAM criteria by regulation as defining source document to determine medical necessity for substance use disorder treatment for health carriers in Washington. The Department of Health requires all licensed substance use disorder professionals and substance use disorder trainees to receive education and training on ASAM criteria. The HCA uses ASAM criteria to determine eligibility for supported employment services, community support services, and the chemical-using pregnant women program. Enacted statutes require use of ASAM criteria to determine effective treatment plans for persons with opioid treatment disorder and require education about ASAM criteria as a component of required training for co-occurring disorder specialists.

Summary of Bill: Effective January 1, 2021, no health plan offered to public employees, Medicaid enrollees, or on the commercial market may require an enrollee to obtain prior authorization for substance use disorder treatment services provided in a residential treatment facility located within Washington State. The scope of this prohibition is limited to withdrawal management services and substance use disorder treatment services as defined in the bill, delivered according to an initial assessment and treatment plan developed by a licensed professional operating within their scope of practice.

Health plans must cover residential substance use disorder treatment initiated in this manner for two days excluding weekends and holidays, or three days if treatment is provided through a withdrawal management program, before conducting a utilization review. The utilization review conducted by the health plan must use ASAM criteria. If the health plan determines that the enrollee's admission was not medically necessary it must still pay for the treatment days expended before the utilization review, and for additional days if the denial comes more than one business day after the receipt of sufficient materials from the facility to conduct the utilization review. The treating provider must document their initial assessment and placement decision using ASAM criteria.

When a health plan enrollee is admitted to a out-of-network service within Washington:

- the health plan must pay for a covered mode of transfer to an in-network facility or program if the health plan covers out-of-network services;
- the health plan is not responsible for reimbursing the facility at a higher rate than it pays for in-network services; and
- the facility may not balance bill the client.

If the health plan's utilization review results in approval of treatment provided at a different facility or at a lower level of care, the plan must make arrangements for the seamless transfer of the enrollee to an appropriate and available facility. The plan must continue to cover the cost of care during the seamless transfer period. A seamless transfer may include same-day or next-day appointments for outpatient care and this requirement does not obligate the plan to provide nontreatment services such as housing.

The admitting facility must notify the health plan within 24 hours of the admission and provide sufficient information to enable the utilization review within two business days, excluding weekends and holidays. These requirements do not prevent a health plan from denying coverage based on insurance fraud.

HCA must collaborate with the Office of the Insurance Commissioner, Medicaid managed care organizations, commercial health plans, substance use disorder treatment providers, and Indian health care providers to develop an action plan to support improved transitions of health plan enrollees between ASAM levels of care for both adults and adolescents. The action plan must include: identification of barriers to obtain timely assessments; specific actions to remove barriers and increase the number of persons who successfully transition between levels of care; allowing higher acuity facilities to bill for lower levels of care; establishing an administrative rate for substance use disorder treatment providers; standardizing forms of communication between health plans and substance use disorder treatment providers; developing standardized length of stay protocols tied to ASAM levels of care; and addressing denials of withdrawal management services based on the client's drug of choice. HCA must develop options by December 1, 2020.

Staff Summary of Public Testimony: PRO: This bill recognizes that individuals in addiction have a window of willingness that is fleeting. If we do not provide them access to care within that window, we may never get a second chance. The system is clunky, with paperwork and assessments that must be conducted only in an outpatient setting, prohibiting seamless transitions from jail or medical beds. The bill is designed to be centered around patients and families in crisis. Addiction providers and health plans have worked tirelessly to come to an agreement. We are seeking an amendment to incorporate final changes. Imagine your child is wasting away and withdrawn from their family. You have done everything you can do to help them and finally they tell you they are ready. Then you have to struggle with insurance companies and they tell you to wait three days for prior authorization. There is no truth to the popular belief that if someone wants help they can just get it. It is near impossible to navigate the system without someone fighting for you. When people do get help at the right time, they can and do recover. We need to reduce barriers to treatment. I am a grieving mother living a nightmare. I told my son we could handle this as a family but our insurance company told us they would not offer him a treatment bed for 29 days. He turned gray and detoxed in my living room. After 25 days he lost hope and died by suicide. The insurance company meets its own access to care standard less than half the time and does not have enough doctors. This law will save lives. When my daughter was ready and willing the barriers to accessing inpatient addiction treatment caused her to be discharged without a plan for detox or treatment. When we got her into detox months later, she begged to be transferred directly to an inpatient facility, but the detox was unable to navigate the hurdles. Please do not let it be too late for someone else's child. The inpatient residential substance abuse facility I own was always full until January 2020 when the managed care organizations took over behavioral health authorizations. I have waiting lists of people wanting to get in but I can not keep the beds full because we lose patients while they wait to get insurance company authorizations. If there is a wait for an appointment, many people will not make it there. As a provider it does not create a bonus for us to have to discharge someone after just three days. There is little transparency when we get an adverse determination. Some insurance companies are way worse than others about denials.
