Background: No state officer or state employee may employ or use any person, money, or property under the officer's or employee's official control or direction, or in their official custody, for the private benefit or gain of the officer, employee, or another.

There is no express authority for, or prohibition against, Washington Department of Fish and Wildlife (WDFW) officers engaging in off-duty law enforcement employment for private benefit.

Summary of Amended Bill: WDFW officers may engage in private law enforcement off-duty employment, in uniform or in plainclothes for private benefit. Private employment is subject to guidelines adopted by the chief of Fish and Wildlife enforcement. These guidelines must ensure that the integrity and professionalism of the Washington Fish and Wildlife enforcement is preserved.

Use of WDFW officer's uniforms shall be considered de minimis use of state property.

The state is not liable for tortious conduct by WDFW officers that occurs while such officers are engaged in private law enforcement off-duty employment. Prior to employment, officers engaging in private employment must notify the private employer in writing of the state's immunity from liability.

If an officer accepts off-duty employment on reservation, trust, or allotted lands of a federally-recognized Indian tribe, the officer must complete the Criminal Justice Training Commission's violence de-escalation and mental health training, including the curriculum of the history of police interactions with Native American communities, and the private employer must have obtained permission from the affected federally recognized Indian tribe.
