Background: Unprofessional Conduct of Health Care Providers. The Department of Health (DOH) certifies, licenses, and regulates dozens of health professions in Washington State. Most of these health professions are governed by a board, commission, or advisory committee which are supported by DOH. All health professions are subject to the Uniform Disciplinary Act (UDA). Under the UDA, DOH or a professional board or commission investigates unprofessional conduct claims and may take disciplinary action against a licensed health care provider. Disciplining actions include fines, license revocations, and restrictions on practice.

Mandatory Reporting of Child Abuse or Neglect. Mandatory reporting laws require certain people to report suspected child abuse or neglect to the Department of Children, Youth, and Families or to law enforcement when a reporter has reasonable cause to believe that a child has suffered abuse or neglect. Mandatory reporters include professional school personnel; registered or licensed nurses; social service counselors; psychologists; and licensed or certified child-care providers.

Damages. Economic damages are objectively verifiable monetary losses, including medical expenses, loss of earnings, burial costs, loss of use of property, cost of replacement or repair, cost of obtaining substitute domestic services, loss of employment, and loss of business or employment opportunities.

Noneconomic damages are subjective, nonmonetary losses, including, but not limited to pain, suffering, inconvenience, mental anguish, disability or disfigurement incurred by the injured party, emotional distress, loss of society and companionship, loss of consortium, injury to reputation and humiliation, and destruction of the parent-child relationship.

State case law has held that exemplary damages—also known as punitive damages—are unavailable in the absence of express statutory authorization.

Sentencing for Criminal Convictions. Crimes are classified as misdemeanors, gross misdemeanors, or felonies (of which there are class A, B, and C felonies). The classification of a crime generally determines the maximum term of confinement, or fine for an offense, or both. For each classification, the maximum terms of confinement and maximum fines are as follows:

Classification	Maximum Confinement	Maximum Fine
Misdemeanor	90 days	$1,000
Gross Misdemeanor	364 days	$5,000
Class C Felony	5 years	$10,000
Class B Felony	10 years	$20,000
Class A Felony	Life	$50,000

Summary of First Substitute Bill: Definition of Female Genital Mutilation. Female genital mutilation is defined as any procedure performed for nonmedical reasons that involves partial or total removal of, or other injury to, the external female genitalia, including but not limited to a clitoridectomy or the partial or total removal of the clitoris or the prepuce or clitoral hood, excision or the partial or total removal—with or without excision of the clitoris—of the labia minora or the labia majora, or both, infibulation or the narrowing of the vaginal opening—with or without excision of the clitoris, or other procedures that are harmful to the external female genitalia, including pricking, incising, scraping, or cauterizing the genital area.

Civil Cause of Action. A minor victim of female genital mutilation may bring a civil action against the person who committed female genital mutilation on the minor for economic and noneconomic damages, punitive damages, reasonable attorneys' fees, and costs incurred in bringing the action. A civil action must be brought within ten years of the injury. This statute of limitations is tolled for a minor until the minor reaches the age of 18.

Unprofessional Conduct of Health Care Providers. It is unprofessional conduct under the Uniform Disciplinary Act for a licensed health care provider to perform female genital mutilation on a minor.

Mandatory Reporting of Child Abuse or Neglect. Abuse or neglect that must be reported by mandatory reporters is expanded to include female genital mutilation.

Education Program. DOH must establish an education program for the prevention of female genital mutilation. The program must provide information about the health risks and emotional trauma inflicted by the practice of female genital mutilation, as well as the civil and criminal penalties for committing female genital mutilation. DOH must develop policies and procedures to both partner with relevant stakeholders to prevent female genital mutilation, and to train health care providers on recognizing factors and victims of female genital mutilation.

Crime of Female Genital Mutilation. A person is guilty of the crime of female genital mutilation when the person knowingly:

- commits female genital mutilation on a minor; or
- transports a minor, or causes or permits the transport of a minor, for the purpose of the performance of female genital mutilation on the minor.

Female genital mutilation is a gross misdemeanor. It is not a defense to female genital mutilation that a person believes that their actions were conducted as a matter of culture, custom, religion, or ritual, that a minor consented to female genital mutilation, or that the minor's parents or guardians consented to female genital mutilation.

A medical procedure does not constitute female genital mutilation if it is performed by a licensed health care provider, and it is necessary for the health of the minor.

A criminal prosecution for female genital mutilation must be brought within ten years after the commission of the crime, or if the crime was committed against a victim under the age of 18, up to the victim's 28th birthday, whichever is later.

Appropriation: None.

Fiscal Note: Available.

Creates Committee/Commission/Task Force that includes Legislative members: No.

Effective Date: The bill contains an emergency clause and takes effect immediately.

Staff Summary of Public Testimony on Original Bill (Law & Justice): The committee recommended a different version of the bill than what was heard. PRO: In previous years, this bill only dealt with female genital mutilation in the context of unprofessional conduct, but licensed health professionals are not the only ones involved in this practice. Female genital mutilation often happens to very young girls. This bill has a civil as well as criminal component. Communities want this criminal prohibition because this practice must end in Washington in order for young girls to grow to their full potential without suffering trauma. Female genital mutilation is recognized in the United States and internationally as a human rights violation. It is a form of gender-based violence and child sexual assault. Many people think of female genital mutilation as a foreign problem, but the focus needs to shift back to local communities, since there are communities in Washington that are practicing female genital mutilation. Washington is number eight in the United States for highest risk population for female genital mutilation. There are several long-term harmful effects of female genital mutilation to victims, including mental trauma, health implications, and physical and emotional scars. There are no benefits to this brutal practice. Everyone has a right to be protected from this kind of harm, especially children. When a law is in place, those who are in favor of stopping female genital mutilation, including parents who are under pressures from their communities, are empowered to reject this practice.

Staff Summary of Public Testimony on First Substitute (Ways & Means): PRO: Washington is one of only 10 states to not have a law against female genital mutilation (FGM). It persists because of a culture of silence. As such, Washington has become a magnet state for these operations. FGM is not medically or religiously mandated. There is a misconception that FGM only impacts immigrants, but it also happens within the U.S. to U.S. born citizens. It does not discriminate. 25,000 females in Washington have been impacted. There is such a lack of knowledge, that victims have to educate their health care providers and therapists to receive help. This bill will implement programs, outreach, and services for girls who have undergone, or are at risk of undergoing FGM, as well as educate the public. Programs that only focus on health outcomes are not effective, but they are much more successful when combined with community outreach and education. Long term, it will relieve pressure from the healthcare system, as girls will no longer come in with trauma from being cut.
