HEALTH CARE ASSISTANTS

Health care assistants (HCAs) are health care workers who are not physicians, dentists, or pharmacists. They are licensed by the Washington State Department of Health and are responsible for providing direct care to patients. HCAs may provide a range of services, including assistance with medication management, dental care, home health care, and more. The state of Washington has specific regulations and requirements for HCAs, including education, training, and ongoing professional development. HCAs are crucial members of the health care team, providing essential support to patients and helping to ensure the delivery of quality care.
