Purpose of the Proposal and Its Anticipated Effects, Including Any Changes in Existing Rules: This rule proposal reclassifies the ferruginous hawk from threatened to endangered in the state of Washington under WAC 220-610-010. Anticipated effects include the additional recognition and prioritization of the conservation need and actions around ferruginous hawk. If the status change is adopted, ferruginous hawk will be removed from WAC 220-200-100 "Wildlife classified as protected shall not be hunted or fished," and added to WAC 220-610-010 "Wildlife classified as endangered species."

Reasons Supporting Proposal: The ferruginous hawk is largely restricted to grasslands and shrubsteppe habitats. Conversion of native grasslands and arid shrublands to agriculture, urbanization, and the degradation of rangelands have contributed to the loss of nesting and foraging habitat on its breeding range in Washington. Degradation of fall and winter ranges frequented by Washington's hawks in migration and the nonbreeding period has been documented through satellite monitoring. Reductions in prey base on the breeding range and depressed prey populations encountered during migration on fall and winter ranges are likely a significant factor in the decline of Washington's breeding population of ferruginous hawks.

The breeding population of ferruginous hawks in Washington is in sustained decline. Between 1974 and 2016, there have been significant declines in nesting territory occupancy, nest success, and productivity. Additionally, the percentage of surveyed nesting territories supporting breeding pairs has significantly declined in the core breeding range of the species in Benton and Franklin counties. The distribution of breeding pairs statewide also appears to have contracted since the 1990s. There has been no improvement in habitat conditions or amelioration of primary threats, and therefore the recommendation is to reclassify the ferruginous hawk from threatened to endangered status in Washington.
